The source of a river is often in upland areas. Here, high levels of precipitation (rain and snow) combined with steep slopes and sparse vegetation result in water flowing overland. In the upper course the river bed is narrow and rocky. As it moves over rocks, the water becomes turbulent and appears fast-flowing.

Mention that the toxic material spilled into the river will 'kill' living organisms in the river. Use the model to explain that if the blue river water receives enough of the chemical spill to kill the wildlife in the river, the toxins will turn the water pink. Now use four or five fast-food vinegar packets to simulate the train cars.
